From this review it will be seen that the agricultural decline in Great Britain has not been due to the mere failure or partial failt ure of crops it any one year, but to a graduater aware that the cultivation of grain is no: profitable, and that live stock alone promised any permanent gain to the agriculturist; those statistics show how they have struggled to take Registime, in 1 tempting to establish a ropub-ite. The people who flocks of sheep have shrunk for in excess of the increase in the proportionate herds of cattle, and the money value of the live stock, taking the two-sheep and cattle-together shows a sleady and heavy loss. The loss of the lands withdrawn from grain may be said to be total, because the addition of the grain lands to that idevoted to the feed crops does stock, nor does it even unable them to main tain their previous numbers of stock. The live stock crop, therefore, is diminishing despite the millions of acres $100 producing grain but which are now devoted to pasture grain but which are now glevoted to pushing and to food for animals year y, therefore the inability of England, or even of the United Kingdom, to produce the breadstuffs and the meats necessary to feed the population and British dependence on other countries for that food is becoming more ascersained and fixed; and this deficienty will continue to enlarge as

The loss of so great a portion of the farmer's capital invested in live stock is made more striking because the decrease has taken place on a larger area of land devoted to pasturage, and on a greater number of acres devoted to the keeping of a smaller number of acres devoted to the keeping of a smaller number of acres uniter permanent pasture, clover grasses, green crops, and the said 100 galtons of whisky into the said district for Alaska."

In U. S. v. Bavaloff (2Saw., 31) the district court for this district, having decided that the district having decided that the district of Alaska was not in force the country, and that the set of June 30, 1834 (4 Stat., 729) regulating the trade and intercaptured with the Indian tribes, was not in force therein, congress, in the general appropriation act of March 3, 1873 (17 Stat., 580), amended 51 of the Alaska act of June 27, 1868 (5 Stat., 280; § 1856 R. S.), so as to extend over that country, 66 20 and, 21 of said act of June 30, 1834, as well as the first relating "to customs, commerce and navigation."

The first of these sections provides, among other things, that "if any person shall introduce or attempt to introduce any spiritous liquous of wine into the Indian, country," experience of the sections of the country of the sections o pay a sum not exceeding $300."

By the set of March 3, 1847, said \(20 \) was

The section was again amended by the acts of February 13, 1862 (12 Stat., 389), and March 15, 1863 (13 Stat., 29; § 2136 R. S.) By these latter amendment the maximum punishment for a violation of the section was again amainded by the acts of February 13, 1862 (12 Stat., 389), and March 15, 1863 (13 Stat., 29; § 2136 R. S.) By these latter amendments the maximum punishment for a violation of the section was fixed at two years' imprisonment and $390 face, and jurisdiction was given to the circuit court as well as the district.

Bishop says (sapra, 5 689) "It is plain that, if a man who has a wicked purpose in his heart a does something criticity foreign in its nature from that purpless, he does not somm to oriminal attempt to do the thing proposed. On the other hand, if he does what is exactly adapted to accomplish the will meant, yet, proceeds not far enough in the doing for the cogu zance of the law, he still seeaps panishment. Again, if he does a thing not completely, as the result discloses, adapted to accomplish the wrone, he may under some circumstances be punishable, while under other circumstances he may seeape.
